L6	HUY TRINH,
L7	Defendant.
L8 L9	I. INTRODUCTION
20	A detention hearing in the above-captioned case for defendant Huy Trinh was conducted
21	on May 7, 2010. The Court has carefully considered the proffers of the government and the
22	defendant's counsel and the Pretrial Services Report ("PSR"). The Court finds by clear and
23	convincing evidence that the defendant is a danger to the community. The Court also finds that by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant poses a risk of flight. For the reasons set
2 4 25	forth below, the Court concludes that there are no conditions, or combinations of conditions
26	which could be fashioned in order to assure the appearance of the defendant for trial if he is
20	released. Therefore, for the reasons set forth herein, the Court orders that the defendant be detained.

II. FACTORS TO CONSIDER UNDER 18 U.S.C. § 3142

1. Charges and Rebuttable Presumption

On April 29, 2010, the defendant was charged by a criminal Complaint with conspiracy to possess with intent to distribute marijuana in violation of Title 21 U.S.C. § 846. The conspiracy count carries a maximum sentence of life in prison. Therefore, there is a rebuttable presumption that he is both a flight risk and a danger. See 18 U.S.C. §3142(e).

2. Danger to the Community

According to the proffers by the Government, on April 29, 2010, agents executed a federal search warrant on the defendant's residence at 1816 Acton St., Berkeley, California. During the search, agents found and seized a .22 caliber semi-automatic Smith and Wesson pistol loaded with eight rounds in the magazine under a dresser in the defendant's bedroom. In a hidden compartment in the same dresser, agents found what appeared to be a silencer. The silencer fit onto the .22 caliber semi-automatic pistol. The pistol had an obliterated serial number.

At the time of the search, the defendant was on pretrial release from a November 2009 arrest for Driving Under the Influence and Possession of Drugs for Sale in November 2009 in California state court. The defendant is currently awaiting trial on these charges. The Court also finds it significant that the defendant was convicted of Kidnapping With a Firearm in San Francisco Superior Court in the early 1990's and was sentenced to 9 years imprisonment.

3. Risk of Flight

According to the PSR and proffers by the Government, the defendant has significant connections to China. The defendant traveled to China as recently as October 13, 2008. The defendant also has two young twins living in China. It is also important to note that the defendant has used at least four aliases and four separate dates of birth in the past. Despite these significant factors weighing in favor of a finding that the defendant is a risk of flight, he has not presented the Court with any viable sureties willing to sign on bond on his behalf.

III. LEGAL AUTHORITY TO DETAIN THE DEFENDANT

Under the Bail Reform Act, an authorized judicial officer may order the detention or release of a defendant pending trial. A rebuttable presumption of both dangerousness and risk of flight exists when the defendant is charged with a drug felony that carries a maximum term of imprisonment of ten years or more. 18 U.S.C. §3142 (e). Once the defendant produces some evidence to rebut the presumption, the presumption has been rebutted. United States v. Cook, 880 F. 2d 1158, 1162 (10th Cir. 1989). However, the presumption does not disappear, but rather remains as a factor for consideration in the Court's determination. Id.

The judicial officer may detain a defendant if the Government proves by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant poses a risk of flight. United States v. Motamedi, 767 F. 2d 1403, 1407 (9th Cir. 1985), United States v. Gebro, 948 F. 2d 1118, 1121 (9th Cir. 1991). The preponderance of evidence shows a risk of flight where, among other factors, the weight of the evidence is enough to alert the defendants to a "reasonable possibility of conviction." United States v. Townsend, 897 F. 2d 989, 993-94 (9th Cir. 1990). A defendant's financial condition and the length of sentence he or she faces are of particular importance in assessing the risk of flight.

The judicial officer may also detain a defendant where the Government shows by clear and convincing evidence that no release condition will reasonably assure the safety of the community. Specifically, detention may be ordered where the court finds no condition or combination of conditions could prevent the defendant's continued or future criminal activity. United States v. Salerno, 481 U.S. 739 (1987).

In assessing danger, physical violence is not the only form of danger contemplated by the statute. Danger to the community can be in the form of continued narcotics activity or even encompass pecuniary or economic harm. United States v. Reynolds, 956 F.2d 192 (9th Cir. 1992). Propensity to commit crime generally may constitute a sufficient risk of danger to come within the act. See United States v. Karmann, 471 F. Supp. 1021, 1022 (C.D. Cal 1979).

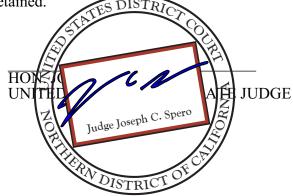

In short, the Government bears the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence that the defendant poses a flight risk, or by clear and convincing evidence that the Detention Order 3 defendant poses a danger to the community. United States v. Gebro, 948 F. 2d 1118, 1120 (9th Cir. 1991); United States v. Motamedi, 767 F. 23d 1403, 1405 (9th Cir. 1985).

IV. CONCLUSION

For the reasons detailed above, the Court finds that the defendant has not overcome the rebuttable presumption that he is a danger to the community and a flight risk. See 18 U.S.C. §3142(e). Therefore, the Court finds that no conditions or combination of conditions or release it could fashion would assure the defendant's appearance for trial if he was released. Therefore, the Court ORDERS that the defendant be detained.
